What do the mass graves tell us?

Mass graves tell us that Poles who fought for Poland are buried in them – those who died for their homeland. It was they who took it from the Germans. It was they who defended the honor of the Polish people in the Warsaw Uprising. The wicked Germans shot and murdered them. They suffered a great deal. They preferred to die, to give their lives for the freedom of their homeland. Their suffering and martyrdom, the tears of their mothers, wives, sisters and children cry out from these graves with the last words that came from their lips before death: “Poland is not yet lost”.
